David Giordano

Global Head of Renewable Power, BlackRock

David Giordano, Managing Director, Global Head - Renewable Power. Mr. Giordano leads the investment strategy and organizational management of the Renewable Power team. He has led the investment strategies across the Americas and APAC since the launch of the Renewable Power platform in 2011. The Renewable Power Group has over $5 billion of equity assets under management and over 250 renewable power projects with over 100 investors in four funds. The team includes 31 investment professionals and has invested across ten countries and four continents.

Mr. Giordano has more than 20 years of investment experience. Previously, he was one of the original members of Babcock & Brown's North American infrastructure team where he closed $4 billion of renewable transactions and on the North American Infrastructure Fund Investment Committee. Mr. Giordano's extensive energy industry experience includes his work at FPL Energy (now NextEra) where he developed and acquired operating and development power assets and played a key role in the first non-registered 144A bond offering for a portfolio of wind assets.

Mr. Giordano is the Chairman of the Board of Directors for the American Council on Renewable Energy (ACORE) Board of Directors, and he serves as a member of the Board of Directors for the American Wind Energy Association (AWEA).

David holds a B.A. in Policy & Management Studies and Economics from Dickinson College, class of 1991; and, he earned a Master in Public Administration from Syracuse University's Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, class of 1996.
